INTRODUCTION

The tourism industry is one of the appropriate means in promoting the economy of both local and global society. At the microeconomic level the tourism sector can reduce poverty with a sustainable livelihood approach (Carney in [1]). In line with Carney, [2] also proves the existence of tourism is very instrumental in living the community around the object of tourism through direct impact, indirect and follow-up that is felt by the community with the good tourism in the form of business opportunities, job opportunities, improving the physical environment of society and improvement of social development communities and the rising prices of land. On the basis of this, tourism is an industry developed by many developing countries.

In an effort to minimize the negative impacts and optimize the positive impact of tourism hence the thought was born to develop a more pro-tourism in the community around the tourist attraction, which became known as Community Based Tourism (CBT) or community-based tourism. In Indonesia, the implementation of CBT is contained in Law Number 10 Year 2009 on Tourism, in Chapter III Chapter 5, The Principle of Tourism Implementation is to empower the local community. Thus, the Act has mandated that the development of Indonesian tourism should take into account the interests of the local (local) community. The issuance of Law Number 10 Year 2009 provides an important change in the approach of tourism development to be community-based.

Community-based tourism (CBT) is closely linked to sustainable tourism development. Some tourism experts such as [3] assert that the community-based development approach (CBT) is a requirement for tourism sustainability. [4] argues that sustainable tourism development emphasizes the community aspect (community-based tourism). [5] underlines that CBT is a form of sustainable tourism implementation. Community-based tourism (CBT) has many advantages, both from the aspect of community development and tourism industry. However, the implementation of the CBT model is highly dependent on the characteristics and conditions of the community / community in the tourist destinations so that CBT implementation model in the region with each other can be different. Therefore, studies relating to the application of CBT are needed as part of a strategy to realize a CBT model based on academic and more applicable frameworks of thought.

Given the importance of the tourism industry in applying the CBT model, it is not surprising that the application of community-based tourism has been widely applied in other areas such as Bali, Batu (Malang) and several other areas and the implementation of CBT has brought progress to the world of tourism, local and local communities [6].

South Kalimantan as an area of many islands surrounded by mountains and sea cause this region is rich in tourism potential. Tourism potential that has been developed in the form of natural tourism such as mountain tourism, sea, river and now has penetrated into cultural tourism. Each district and city has its own tourist attraction and historical heritage that becomes the attraction of every region. On the basis of its potential, the current Department of Tourism, youth and sports of South Kalimantan and Banjarmasin City are keen-giatnya develop tourism potential. This is evident from the increasing number of foreign and domestic tourist arrivals coming to several tourist attractions in South Kalimantan, which is 64.6% in the period 2009 to 2014. More details can be seen in table 1.1 below:

The conclusion of the study of Kampung Wisata Kuin Banjarmasin District North Banjarmasin City is as follows:

1. Kampung Kuin has the potential of tourism that is indeed should be made Kampung Wisata. The potential of natural tourist attractions in the form of river rafting tour where tourists are invited to see a collection of monkeys and bekantan along with flora and fauna endemic typical of South Borneo in the tourist attraction of Kembang Island, watched the activity in Muara Kuin Floating Market, see the historic mosque Sultan Suriansyah and his grave in the region Kampung Wisata Kuin. But the readiness of people's human resources still need to be improved and the need to set up institutions or organizations supporting the tourism community such as tourism conscious groups
2. He made Kampung Kuin as Kampung Wisata not only for the sake of preserving the cultural values of tradition that prevailed in the community downhill but also ecosystem sustainability. Through CBT, Community involvement as a manager is not only aimed at empowering the community but in order to maintain the economic sustainability of the community.
3. In Kampung Wisata Kuin has implemented CBT in its activities by involving the community in tourism activities either as a tourist object manager. However, the involvement of the community in tourism activities is still not optimal in the sense that its involvement is still limited to be a manager, not a policy maker. This is related to the human resources and skills that are still low.

From the results of research and discussion then the recommendations that can be submitted by the author are as follows:

1. High commitment from the local government of South Kalimantan is required in order to increase the role of the community in Kampung Wisata program which has been developed through coordination and preparation of the right plan so that the existence of Kampung Wisata Kuin has high competitiveness to attract more tourists.

2. Relevant institutions are expected to conduct intensive training and human resource development to the community, especially in the field of tourism and its supporters.
3. The need to establish POKDARWIS as a tourist management agency so that it will run well as expected. The local government of South Kalimantan in cooperation with tourism and university managers in order to provide input and opportunities for activities in Kampung Wisata Kuin. should include (1) the principles and generalizations inferred from results, (2) any limitation or exceptions to these principles and generalizations, (3) theoretical and/or practical implication of the research, and (5) recommendations.
