Reviewer- A

Decision: Major revisions required

Overall, the article provides the importance of environmental protection and sustainability promotion in Indonesia due to increased economic activities and industrialization. The authors reference existing literature to support their argument that environmental protection in Indonesia is governed by the Environmental Law of 2009, and the government and legal authorities are working to enforce regulations to mitigate environmental damage. The study also identifies gaps in previous research on Indonesian environmental protection laws and aims to fill that gap by examining Indonesia's sustainability and environmental protection legislation. However,

- The literature review section must present an overview of various legislations related to environmental protection in different countries. The article must highlight the importance of preserving the environment and its constituent parts from the associated alterations caused by human activity.

- The authors could include information about the types of published sources they examined, the sample size, and any statistical analyses conducted.
  - Additionally, the paper does not provide any clear recommendations or implications for policymakers or future research. Therefore, it would be helpful for the authors to include key takeaways of their study and how they could inform future policy decisions or research directions.
  - The discussion section provides a good overview of the various environmental protection laws and regulations in Indonesia. However, it could benefit from more detailed examples and specific cases to illustrate how these laws have been implemented and enforced in practice.
  - There should be an implications section effectively highlighting the theoretical and practical significance of the research, specifically in terms of its contribution to the expanding literature on environmental sustainability and protection.

Decision: Major revisions required

The article titled "Highlighting the legislation concerning environmental protection and the promotion of sustainability in Indonesia" is a research article that aims to analyse the legal and sustainability concerns in Indonesia through a secondary data collection technique.

- The article is informative and well-written. It presents relevant information on the legal and sustainability concerns in Indonesia and provides a good overview of various legislations related to environmental protection in different countries. However, the article must discuss the international laws, regulations or frameworks which emphasize the adverse effects of human activities on natural ecosystems and humankind and how to minimize these effects.
- The methodology used in the study involves an in-depth analysis of Indonesian environmental protection laws, regulations, and other public information sources. The use of a secondary data collection technique is appropriate for this study as it provides accurate and relevant information from published sources. However, the article could have been more concise and better structured for ease of understanding.
- The discussion section presents a discussion on environmental protection legislation in Indonesia. The article should also highlight the various laws and regulations established to promote environmental conservation in the country, including Law No. 4 of 1982, Law No. 5 of 1990, Law No. 23 of 1997, and Law No. 32 of 2009 (UUPPLH).
- There must be a conclusion and recommendations section providing a comprehensive summary of the research findings and offers practical suggestions for improving environmental protection and sustainability in Indonesia.
- Authors should report recommendations to expand education on environmental protection and make it a required component of the school curriculum.

	Here are some more suggestions for authors	Thanks a lot.
1	The article should point out that Indonesia has managed to create and implement robust environmental protection rules in a relatively short period, especially when compared to other industrialized and developing countries.	Thank you for your kind suggestions. Done as suggested. Please see pages 3
2	The results section could benefit from a more critical discussion on the effectiveness of these laws in promoting environmental conservation in the country.	Dear reviewer, Thank you for your kind comments. Done as suggested. Please see pages 14-16
3	The conclusion must effectively highlight the current state of environmental regulations in Indonesia and acknowledge that while there have been improvements, there is still room for more revisions and expansion of environmental protection legislation.	Dear reviewer, Thank you for your kind suggestions. We have revised the conclusion by effectively highlighting the current state of environmental regulations in Indonesia and acknowledging that while there have been improvements, there is still room for more revisions and expansion of environmental protection legislation.
