Dear Professor Arifani,
(CC: Professor Daniel Mills, Co-editor CALL-EJ)

Thank you once again for your submission to CALL-EJ. I am happy to let you know that your paper has passed the internal review stage. It will now be sent to our external review team. This process may take some time as we have received a high volume of papers recently. We will get back to you as soon as possible.

Regards,
Jeremy White

Dear Prof Daniel Mills,

I would like to get an update from you regarding my research paper submission (12 May 2023) entitled "Assessing online TBLT practices using RAIS frameworks: In-service teachers' and students' perspectives"" as all my co-authors are also looking forward to hearing the results. On 27 July you gave the reviewers a nudge to get back the result, but unfortunately I still did not get the results yet this time.

Thank you

Warm regards

Yudhi

Dear professor Yudhi Arifani,

Thank you for waiting. We have now received both review results and I am happy to say that they have suggested that we accept this paper with minor changes. I have included the reviewer comments below, so please address them and send the paper back to us when it is completed. There is no particular deadline for this, just please make sure you go through it carefully. Please also highlight the changes in the paper itself.

We look forward to hearing back from you soon.

Jeremy White

Reviewer comments

itle:

- Clearly reflects what has been studied.

Abstract:

- Clearly informs what the study is about.

Introduction:

- It is unclear to me why the authors compared and examined the differences in perspectives between teachers and students. How would the results indicating differences or not contribute to the design or implementation of tasks following the TBLT approach? A robust argument addressing this issue should be explicitly presented.

Literature review:

- A review of previous studies is useful and directly relevant to the study.
- I am unsure about "TBLA" in the second sub-topic within the literature review section.

- Before introducing the research questions, there appears to be an abrupt transition from prior studies, which are argued around the TBLT concepts, to the study of teachers' and students' perceptions of TBLT. I would recommend establishing a connection between the gap in previous research and the rationale for exploring teachers' and students' perceptions, including the value of comparing their viewpoints. This connection should emphasize how such perceptions contribute to or offer suggestions for enhancing and implementing online TBLT methodologies.
- I find it somewhat uncertain whether the study's purpose is to evaluate online TBLT practices using the proposed frameworks (as indicated by the title) or to assess the frameworks themselves (as indicated by the research questions). Please review and ensure that this aspect is clarified and maintained consistently throughout the entire paper.

Participants and settings:

- This section has provided the essential information for readers to comprehend the study's context. To further enhance readability, the authors might consider organizing the details concerning teachers, learners, in-service training, and the teaching session into distinct sections. Such modification would enhance the flow of the content.
- Regarding the teaching session, it would be useful to include a brief overview of the content and topics covered during the session. This information would help readers determine the effectiveness of the implemented TBLT approach and to comprehend the results presented in the paper.

Instruments:

- I noticed that many questions seem to prompt respondents to assess teachers and learners (questions beginning with "The teacher..." and "The students..."). This raises a question as to whether the obtained results actually reflect evaluations of TBLT, or if these questions should instead begin with "The online TBLT" to ensure a more direct assessment of the approach itself.

Findings:

- The findings section seems to be quite lengthy.

Discussion:

- In concluding the discussion, it would be beneficial to provide practical recommendations for online TBLT task characteristics that would effectively address the four framework aspects based on the findings. These suggested recommendations could offer valuable insights for readers, especially educators involved in designing and implementing TBLT tasks, particularly within an online context.
- In the final paragraph of the discussion, please complete the citation where marked as (Reference).

References:

- The reference list follows APA guidelines, but please ensure that the volume numbers are italicized.

Dear Professor Jeremy White and Daniel Mills

Warm greetings from Bangkok

After resubmitting my paper with minor revisions on October 30th, 2023, could you please kindly provide an update for possible inclusion in the August 2023 issue (in this November 2023)?

I do apologize to ask this as I have to report it to my university in Thailand before November 30, 2023 for my extension.

I am looking forward to hearing from you.

Thanks,
Yudhi

Dear Professor Arifani,

I have edited your paper. Please note that in my enthusiasm, I also edited the quotes of your participants. Please disregard those edits; you will probably want to use their original words. In addition to issues with grammar and punctuation, there are still a number of formatting issues. Please refer to the submissions page of CALL-EJ to make sure you are following the correct format:

<https://callej.org/index.php/journal/about/submissions>

I have also included an example paper, so you can match yours to that.

Kind regards,
Daniel

Warm greetings from Bangkok

I have to deliver my big thanks and appreciation for your comprehensive edits. I am very glad to accept all your quotes (in the participants and many other parts). Thank you again for your kind edits for punctuation (such as double stop, missing comma, and other things), so many double spaces, formatting (such as Table, Heading, Subheading, Paragraph), and references (such as italication) issues.

Now, I am so glad to inform you that I have submitted the final revised version (formatted based on your example) into the OJS link.

God bless you and all editorial teams.

Finally, I am looking forward to hearing the upcoming good news for my published article.

All the best

Hi Yudhi,

Sorry, we've fallen a little behind. Jeremy was on a business trip last week, and I'm going on one this week. We should have all the papers up for this issue this week, but we will need to check to see if it's ready for publication or needs anything fixed before we upload it. We will contact you a little later this week.

Dear Professor Jeremi White and Daniel Mills

Good Morning from from Bangkok

After the final edit, I found one more issue regarding the third co-author's email address (as previously) was written into yaoping.l@mail.rmutk.ac.id and now it has been revised into yaoping.l@mail.rmutk.ac.th. Below I attached my final revised paper.

I do apologize for this and thank you for your kind understanding.

Very much looking forward to hearing the publication date from you.

Best regards

Yudhi
